MISS CHILDERS INDUCES A YOUNG TENNESSEAN TO RETRACT CERTAIN STORIES

Miss Childers, of Trenton, Tenn., is a very pretty and bright and quite a belle.

She was married to a young man from a neighboring village, and she would have none of him, and a few days ago he began to circulate damaging reports about the young woman.

The stories finally came to her ears. She borrowed a shot-gun, mounted a horse and went in quest of her traducer, whom she found in his home surrounded by a large number of his friends.

Looking back at the barrels of her gun, which were loaded with buckshot, she said to the man and said: "You villain! Acknowledge before these gentlemen that you have lied about me and that there is no truth in anything you have said, or I will blow out your brains."

The young man, amid the mockery of his companions, promptly acknowledged all that was demanded of him. She immediately left, escorted by an admiring crowd.

Mangled Porma on the Pavement

THE MURDER OF A FORMER BOSTON

One of the most tragic and mysterious deaths which has happened in Chicago in years, occurred at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

At the corner of Madison and Clark streets in the largest restaurant in the West, known as the Boston Oyster House. A force of two hundred waiters is regularly employed, and seven thousand persons are served daily.

The building is six stories in height, the top floor being devoted to the manufacture of butter, creamed on the premises. Shortly before two o'clock Tuesday afternoon, a man named John J. Mordough, manager of the oyster house, went up into the attic and proceeded thence to the roof.

Five minutes later his mangled and mangled body was found on the sidewalk on Madison street. A panic ensued, and ten thousand persons blocked the streets.

The police, at once being investigated, found that Mordough had been up on the roof without reaching any satisfactory conclusion. Two theories are advanced—one of which is that Mordough was followed to the roof of the building by a woman whom he had charged.

That an attempt was made to murder the man, and that the water sewer Mordough and threw him from the roof. A building was found on the roof and a trail of blood led to the edge of the corner from which the body was thrown to the street.

Seth M. Mordough came to the city from Boston eight years ago. He had a more extensive acquaintance than any man in Chicago and was one of the most popular business men in the Mississippi valley.

He was married to a woman who was a widow and had a young son. He was a man of great energy and was a successful business man.

BOUTELLE & BURR, PROPRIETORS.
C. A. BOUTELLE, Editor.
All business letters should be addressed to Boutelle & Burr, and communications intended for publication should be addressed to "Editor of Wing and Courier."
FRIDAY, MAY 6, 1887.
"Good women are natural Mugwumps," says the Springfield Republican. That is a gross libel on the fair sex as untrue as it is ungalant.
Omaha rejoices in the possession of a citizen with two mouths. That man must be a tremendous Mugwump, mouth being the principal characteristic of the average Mugwump.
The West Virginia Senatorship contest has been settled by the election of Judge Faulkner, a son of the Minister to France under President Buchanan. The Senator-elect is about forty years old and Judge of the Thirtieth Judicial Circuit Court.
The Brooklyn Citizen has a daily editorial now on the New York World, the chief point of which is that its New York contemporary is a "liar." It is said to see our Democratic brethren calling each other hard names.
Mr. Theodore Cook, of Cincinnati, affirms that the Democratic party in Ohio is finally united on Cleveland, but the Cincinnati Enquirer says that those who know a thing or two about current politics "smile all over" when they read Mr. Cook's remark.
The Louisville Courier-Journal declares that Mr. Carlisle is to-day "the most conspicuous figure in the politics of this country." Mr. Winters may now make up his mind to withdraw from the paper wars from the Mugwump editors, who will never overlook this slight, but upon the reform statesman at Washington.
A Southern paper devoted to the cause of labor, the Working World, denounces the course of the President on labor legislation and says unless he "brings forth fruit speedily for repentance" organized labor in the South can be counted for "hot blood." In his effort to be all things to all persons Mr. Cleveland has admirably succeeded in pleasing no one.
The Boston Herald has to admit that Mr. Blaine is gaining strength with Massachusetts Republicans. The confession is doubtless caused, it is a tremendous thing, but the evidence of Mr. Blaine's popularity with the people is so marked that it can no longer be denied by the Cleveland organs with any degree of success.
Senator Vest warns Mr. Randall that he must change his course or go to the rear. Success in bulldozing the President has made the Missouri statesman rash. If he comes in collision with the Representative from Pennsylvania he will quickly learn that he has taken a big contract on his hands. Mr. Randall will not take his reform from Senator Vest as meekly as did the reform President.
The Salt Lake City Tribune charges that the President removed a United States District Attorney in Utah for no other reason than that the "Mormon chiefs resented his removal." This official, it says, has been more successful in "putting the treacherous organization under subjection to the laws than all the attorneys that have been there for thirty years." Such an officer surely ought to be sustained, but a strict regard for duty has little weight with this Administration.
The old veterans are very vigilant at the bitter attack made upon Gen. Sheridan by Gen. Rosser, of Virginia. They express the opinion that a man who received his military education at the expense of the Government ought to desert it in its time of need to join the enemy in its mighty poor business when he attempts to malign a gallant defender of the Union. The Democratic politicians are also being exercised over the letter reminding that it came at an inopportune time.
In short, and to sum up the whole matter, the Mugwump idea is that honesty is the best policy, in politics as in everything else. New York Evening Post.
The above would sound well if it did not come from one of the chief exponents of the Mugwump idea, an organ known to be absolutely incapable of an honest political act. Even if the evidence was not all against the theory here advanced the endorsement of the Post would be fatal.
A Washington special says that Special Agent Hannon of New York has made a report which accuses the firm, of which Mr. Strauss, recently appointed Minister to Turkey, is senior member, of defrauding the Government of many thousands of dollars by an extensive scheme of under-valuation. This looks as though the President had secured one more for reform of the Cleveland type, namely, taking care of his friends regardless of the fitness of the appointee.
The New York Times says that there is but one way to secure fair trade, and that is another name for free trade, and that is by making it a distinct national issue, but that the Democratic party is not ready to do this. (If the making of this question a national issue means its success only in the name of common sense is the party afraid to go before the people on it? The very fact that the Democrats always go on both sides of the question in every campaign is of itself evidence that the leaders fully appreciate the hopelessness of a free trade canvass. The Republicans would like to see them act up to their convictions in the next campaign as there could be but one result in a square contest of protection vs. free trade.)
